*Martin Luther King Jr.
Ed. Center*

The Veterinary Technician Program gives youth both applied experience and academic work in veterinary medicine. Youth work directly with animals, and also attend a weekly class instructed by a veterinarian. The class uses curriculum from Cornell University in which basic medical concepts, animal behavior, and animal body systems are taught. Upon completion of this course, youth have a broader understanding of veterinary science, including an improved sense of empathy, compassion, and responsibility.
